"LOG CABIN" GREA

Cantillon's Place in Chicago Headquarters for Players.

With the baseball season at an end, now comes the interesting part of the year, when the players and fans gather around the fires at the Log Cabin in Chicago and fight the battle all over

The players have broken training, and no one cares if once in a while they do breast the mahogany and indulge mod-erately in that which loosens their tongues, giving up secrets of the dia-mond which do not find their way into mond which do not find their way into the newspapers as a rule.

The Log Cabin, which is owned by Joe and Mike Cantillon, is the winter baseball center of the universe, according to John R. Bulman, in the Minneapolis Tribune. There they have the addresses of every one prominent in baseball, and generally can locate the men who have been out of the game for years. The sporting editors are gorged with news during the summer months, but in the winter time they have to fall back on the Cabin. It is the first place to which players, magnates, and umpires resort when striking Chicago.

J. Peck Sharp, who knows more ball players than anyone else in the country, will continue in charge of the Cabin, and that in itself bespeaks a successful season, as Peck is a great drawing card, and baseball men go miles in order to have a word with Peck. He is too fat to play now, but never misses a good game. When anyone questions Peck's standing in the baseball world, all he has to do is pull out his pass to the American League grounds, and it is shown that Charles Comiskey honored bim by giving him the first complimentary book issued. To make it strong, Peck's father received book No. 2.

O'Neil to Tour Coast.

There is one cloud that hovers over the anticipations of a big winter at the Cabin—Tip O'Neil will probably be missing. The Tip O'Neil who played with Strangerolls team is not referred to, There is one cloud that hovers over as he may call now and them. It seems that they call all baseball men named O'Nell "Tip." Norris O'Nell, president of the Western League, is organizing a club to make a tour of the Pacific Coast. and is only waiting for preliminaries to be concluded at the other end.

If he makes a go at it he will have with him one of the greatest teams that ever went barnstorming, as a majority of his players will be from the Detroit club. Several White Sox are on the list, including Jiggs Donahue.

Expect War Talk. One thing can be expected during the winter-a lot of talk about baseball war. The minor league magnantes feel as if National and American leagues are using the minors as mats on which to PSYCHI wipe their feet, and in the winter they pian campaigns for getting even, though somehow or other these wars never ma-terialize. The situation is worse now than it ever was, and all grievances will be gired—be sure of that.

G. W. U. to Have Training Table

As an evidence that it means business and is willing to go to lengths to save the athletic situation at George Washington University, the football management of that institution has decided to establish a training table at Patton's restaurant, on Thirteenth street, near E, for the varsity eleven and the second

This energetic action on the part of the gridiron authorities is expected to end all discussion of the possibility of the team being disbanded and the schedule for 1907 abandoned,
